

Al Costello

Soccer

Upon moving to Canada from Liverpool, England in 1967, the entire Costello clan immediately headed for the soccer fields. Alan started playing minor soccer at age 12 and was called up to play for the men's team only 3 years later. By 16, he was playing full time in a men's league for the Ingersoll Flyers, a team he would play with for many years to come.

Not only is Alan Costello an excellent soccer player, but he has been able to transfer those skills onto others. As a coach and player, he has been able to pass along his knowledge and love for the game to younger players and his peers alike.

In 1992, Alan joined the Ingersoll Minor Soccer executive, where he held various positions including director of coaching, convenor, and player development rep, as well as playing an integral part in amalgamating IMS with the Flyers to form what is now the Ingersoll Soccer Club.
